

STEADY PROGRESS IN THE SCHOOLS

Modern Methods Are Being Adopted by Granville County Educators.

MANY NEW BUILDINGS

Much Attention Is Paid to Educational Needs of Country Pupils.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] ONFOLD, N. C., May 8.—Granville county, N. C., cannot say with a straight face that it is not a place of unusual fertility. It is a place of natural resources, extraordinary in the history of the state. There is only one agricultural product that can be considered in any measure a leading crop, and that is tobacco. Tobacco has made the county famous. In connection with this industry the county has developed more successful tobacco plantations than any other county in America. It would be difficult to find a bright tobacco market in this or the neighboring states that does not number among its most successful growers of tobacco the Granville county boy.

The very fact that there is no one occupation or industry that overshadows the general activity of the people of the county has caused a more uniform development and a higher degree of friendly co-operation and community life. This has in a great measure resulted in a more homogeneous and democratic citizenship, with much less of that exaggerated individualism and semi-feudal social system that prevail in a measure in the rural sections of many sections of the South.

It is not intended to imply that there are not different elevations in the social scale. In fact, there is a large number of aristocratic families that have retained for generations permanent capacity for both business and culture and a continuity of sterling qualities of character. With all of this, however, there is little of that severe aloofness in matters of common interest, especially in the efforts to build up schools. This makes it much easier to produce and develop a sentiment in favor of education among the people through the public schools.

A Steady Growth.
In this growing interest in public education there has been no sudden spurts or unconnected shocks, but a series of gradual and related developments with similar movements throughout the South. Five or six years ago the question of increasing the school funds of the county by special tax was urged upon the people, and with this effort grew the demand for better buildings and more thoroughly qualified teachers. These represent the main features of the educational campaign in the county at present and the interest is growing as it spreads from the more populous and prosperous districts to the more remote and less densely settled.

The county, being alone the average size and its own town, Oxford, being small, makes the school and comparatively small, and so the amount that may be used for building is inadequate to the demands for new houses.
Still, progress is being made, and about $30,000 worth of building has been done in the rural districts and small villages within the last five years. Creedmoor, a village of two or three hundred inhabitants, has just completed a $20,000 brick house, which is perhaps the best building in the State when the size of the place is considered. Another village, though smaller, will soon begin the erection of a two-story building to cost about $3,500. Quite a number of modern, well-equipped, two or three-room houses have been built in the various country districts.

The daily average attendance, length of term and number of teachers have increased between 30 and 50 per cent.
within the period of educational renaissance.

Improving Grounds.
More and more attention is being paid each year to the improvement of the grounds and adornment of buildings. More emphasis is being placed on those subjects which will be of practical service in the business life of the country people. The old idea of trying to educate the boys and girls out of the country into the towns has, to some extent, been changed into an interest in agricultural education may be mentioned a contest in corn-raising.
Prizes are offered by the State and county to stimulate contests. Over $200 worth of prizes are offered, and there is a spirited race among the boys of the different townships.
